

This year's ELTA conference has seen a full revival of interest: for two days, Belgrade was Europe's capital of language teaching, with more than 350 participants.

The atmosphere was inspiring and due to the large interest and number of presenters and lecturers, the presentations and workshops were held in parallel sessions most of the time.

The TBL4 Tourism project team were excited with the opportunity to present the project to the interested audience, in a session that included both the information about the project and the methodology of Task Based Teaching.

The presentation came at a time when the project has produced its first tangible activities for the future TBL4T Course, and the discussion that followed the presentation definitely outlined the path for future dissemination of the project results.
